TUESDAY EVEN'G., AUGUST 26, 1879.

A SINKING MOUNTAIN .- The following is telegraphed from Atlanta, Ga.:

in the northeast corner of this State a recent heavy sterm occurred, with thunder and lightning, to an extent theretofore unknown, accompanied by a terrible shaking of the earth. The day after it was discovered that the northeast side of Chattapooga mountain, four miles northeast of Tailulah, sloping down to the Chatta-norga river at an angle of ferty five degrees, the top of which is about 1,200 feet above the riv-er, was gradually sinking. A party of gentle-men visited the meuntain last Sunday, and found that it was not sliding but sinking, making a break near the top, and at one place on the top of a sloping ridge leaving a perpendicular back-the depth of which is about sixteen feet and the number of acres about thirty or furty-rather in shape of a horseshoe, the toe being at the top of the mountain, where the greatest depth of sinking is. In the centre of this the earth had evidently been thrown up, as trees are now standing with their tops down ward and the roots up, and large stenes are seen down the mountair. I made an estimate of the measurement of the place to be two bun dred feet in diameter. Since then the earth has continued to siak until it is nearly level with the river. The phenomenon is teing considered by the State geologist and many reientific men. The theory is that the river has readually bellowed out away under the moun-
